Midwest Airlines Upgrades Louisville Service Louisville International Airport Now Offers All-Jet Service

Louisville, KY (February 7, 2007)– Midwest Airlines today announced a significant enhancement to its service from Louisville International Airport. Beginning May 1, 2007, the airline will upgrade its two daily flights between Louisville and its Milwaukee, WI, hub from 19-seat turboprop aircraft to 32-seat Dornier 328 regional jets. With this enhancement, Louisville International Airport reaches a new milestone, all-jet service.

“We have been working with Midwest Airlines to upgrade its popular service to Milwaukee for quite some time and are thrilled Midwest has decided to grow its presence in Louisville,” said Skip Miller, Executive Director, for Louisville International Airport.

Marketing Director Tom Tyra added, “We have set the attainment of all-jet service and better access to the western U.S. as core goals of our marketing program. Midwest Airlines’ announcement allows us to achieve both goals while providing our customers with another choice for air travel.”

Midwest Airlines based in Milwaukee, WI, features jet service to major destinations throughout the United States. From Louisville, Midwest offers non-stop service to Milwaukee, WI, and convenient connections to the West and Midwestern U.S. Catering primarily to business-and discerning-leisure travelers, the airline has earned a reputation as ‘the best care in the air’ by providing impeccable service and onboard amenities at competitive fares.

Skyway Airlines, Inc—Midwest’s wholly owned subsidiary— operates as Midwest Connect and offers connections to Midwest Airlines, as well as point-to-point service between select markets on regional jet and turboprop aircraft. Together the airlines offer service to 49 cities. Visit <http://www.midwestairlines.com> for more information.
