United Airlines Announces New Nonstop Service from Louisville to Denver

Region Gains New Nonstop Destination and Improved Access to the West

Louisville, KY (September 22, 2009) United Airlines today announced that it will launch daily nonstop jet service between Louisville International Airport (SDF) and Denver International Airport (DEN) beginning December 17, 2009. United Express carrier SkyWest Airlines, using a 50-seat Canadair Regional Jet, will operate the service.

“For over a year the airport worked directly with the business community and airline partners to re-establish nonstop service to Denver and to increase access to top destinations in the western U.S. Today, we are thrilled to announce new nonstop jet service to one of the region’s most popular business and leisure destinations—Denver, CO,” said Skip Miller, Executive Director for the Louisville Regional Airport Authority.

Miller added, “This service will significantly reduce the total travel time to and from the west coast and provide travelers with convenient connections to more than 100 destinations served from United’s Denver hub”.

Schedule Effective December 17, 2009

With this announcement, United Express will offer seven daily jet departures from Louisville, including six flights to Chicago-O’Hare and one flight to Denver. With the addition of nonstop service to Denver, Louisville International will provide nonstop service to 25 destinations—including 17 of the region’s top 20 most visited cities.
